

Letter of Recommendation

To Whom It May Concern,

I am pleased to write this recommendation for Richard Rybak, one of the most remarkable students I have had the opportunity to teach at Lyceum. Richard stands out not only for his academic strengths, but also for the maturity, initiative, and work ethic he brings into environments he enters. I highly recommend him for admission to the program he has chosen at CODE University, as I am convinced he will be an asset to your community from day one.

Richard is a student who naturally combines analytical thinking with strong communication skills. He excels in mathematics, business analysis, problem solving, and presenting—disciplines in which he consistently demonstrates both precision and creativity. What makes him truly exceptional is his ability to translate theory into practice. Whether he is working with data, managing a project, or solving a complex problem, he approaches every task with curiosity, responsibility, and a clear desire to understand how things work in real-life contexts. This mindset aligns perfectly with hands-on, project-based study.

His achievements beyond the classroom speak for themselves. As a five-time Slovak basketball champion and former national team player, Richard has already experienced the full spectrum of team roles—from being the quiet learner on the bench to carrying the responsibility of a captain. This has shaped him into a resilient leader who knows how to support others, motivate a team, and remain calm under pressure. In school, he has been a backbone of his class—someone others rely on not only for his skills, but for his integrity, reliability, and kindness.

Richard also brings substantial practical experience. His internship at DXC Technology, his ongoing role in the startup AI:Dental, and his project work with Aston ITM show his ability to thrive in professional settings. He adapts quickly, learns fast, communicates clearly, and contributes meaningfully. His blend of business thinking and IT skills is rare for a student of his age—and his curiosity pushes him to go far beyond what is required.

On a personal level, Richard is friendly, thoughtful, and easy to talk to. He demonstrates high ethical standards, is deeply respectful, and approaches situations with maturity. He is the kind of student who elevates the people around him—through teamwork, leadership, and genuine care for others.

I am confident that Richard will bring to your university not only knowledge and skills, but also energy, drive, and the right attitude for hands-on study. He is motivated, capable, and fully ready for the next step. I strongly recommend him without hesitation.

Sincerely,

Milina Matulová
